

Bus filter price

Summary of Content

Bus air filter prices vary widely depending on type, material, and supplier, typically ranging from $20 to several hundred dollars per unit, with bulk purchases offering cost savings.

Price Overview

Bus air filters are essential for engine efficiency and longevity, and their prices depend on the type and material. Common types include paper, cotton, and synthetic fiber filters, with paper being the most cost-effective but requiring more frequent replacement, while synthetic filters offer higher durability and filtration efficiency. Individual bus air filters generally cost between $20 and $150, though high-performance or specialized filters can exceed this range. For fleet operators, bulk purchasing from manufacturers, especially in China, can reduce costs due to economies of scale and ensure timely availability of critical components. Some suppliers also offer discounts for orders exceeding certain amounts, such as a 5% discount for purchases over €2000.

Cleaning and Maintenance Costs

In addition to replacement, bus filters can be cleaned and serviced. Professional cleaning services, such as those offered by FilterMaster DPF, provide net prices for cleaning bus filters, though transportation costs and VAT are additional. Regular maintenance, including cleaning or replacement every 12,000–15,000 miles, helps maintain engine performance and fuel efficiency.
