

Comprehensive Pricing Guide for Distribution Boxes

Summary of Content

Distribution boxes range from basic residential panels costing tens to hundreds of dollars to premium industrial and smart enclosures priced significantly higher, with usage spanning residential, commercial, and utility-scale applications.

Pricing Overview

- Small Residential Distribution Boxes: Typically rated from 32A to 125A, with 1-12 circuits, prices vary based on material (thermoplastic or metal), IP rating, and safety features. Surface-mounted units generally cost less than flush-mounted options, with standard models starting around $50-$150 and premium models with surge protection or residual current devices reaching $200-$400 .
- Commercial and Industrial Panels: Larger enclosures with higher amperage, modular designs, and multiple circuits can range from $500 to several thousand dollars, depending on features like smart monitoring, arc-flash protection, and IP65+ ratings for outdoor use .
- Smart and Advanced Distribution Boxes: Units with embedded communication modules, predictive diagnostics, and battery integration for solar or peak-demand management are priced higher due to advanced electronics and customization, often exceeding $1,000 per unit in large-scale projects . Pricing is influenced by material quality, circuit capacity, safety certifications, and additional accessories such as blanking plates, cable entry systems, and modular expansion options .
