

Cost of supplying fixed optical attenuators

Summary of Content

Fixed optical attenuators typically cost between $5 and $50 per unit, depending on specifications and connectors.

Price Range

The cost of a fixed optical attenuator depends on several factors, including the attenuation value (e.g., 1 dB to 30 dB), connector type (LC, SC, FC, ST), and manufacturer. For standard fiber-optic attenuators used in WDM or general optical networks, prices generally fall in the $5-$50 range per piece. Higher-precision or specialty attenuators, such as those for high-power lasers or femtosecond applications, can cost more .

Factors Affecting Cost

- Attenuation Level: Higher dB values or custom attenuation levels may increase the price.
- Connector Type: Common connectors like LC or SC are usually less expensive, while specialty connectors or in-line types may cost more .
- Quality and Brand: Reputable brands like FS, DigiKey, and Fosco Connect offer consistent performance, which can slightly increase cost compared to generic options .
- Application: Attenuators designed for high-power lasers or precise laboratory measurements are more expensive due to specialized materials and design .
