

How to conceal cable trays

Summary of Content

Cable trays can be effectively concealed using under-desk trays, raceways, cable sleeves, furniture, and decorative elements to create a clean, organized look.

Under-Desk and Wall-Mounted Solutions

One of the simplest ways to hide cable trays is to mount them under desks or along walls. Under-desk trays keep power cords, HDMI cables, and other wires neatly contained and out of sight, while wall-mounted raceways can run cables along the edges of walls or behind entertainment centers . Many raceways come with adhesive backs, allowing installation without drilling, and can be painted to match the wall color for a seamless appearance .

Cable Sleeves and Bundling

Cable sleeves are flexible tubes that encase multiple wires, giving them a unified, streamlined look. They are available in fabric, neoprene, or plastic and can be cut to the desired length for a custom fit . Using Velcro straps or cable ties to bundle cables together also prevents tangling and keeps them organized along desks or walls .

Furniture and Decorative Concealment

Strategically placing furniture, baskets, or plants can hide cable trays while enhancing room aesthetics . For example, a decorative basket under a desk or a potted plant near a TV stand can obscure cables without permanent modifications. Built-in cabinets or shelving units can also house cable trays, keeping them functional yet invisible .
