

What material are Nigerian cable trays made of

Summary of Content

Nigerian cable trays are primarily made from galvanized steel, stainless steel, fiberglass, and powder-coated steel.

Common Materials

Galvanized Steel: This is one of the most widely used materials for cable trays in Nigeria. Hot-dip galvanized steel trays offer superior structural strength, corrosion resistance, and long-term durability, making them suitable for industrial, commercial, and construction applications (Ned-Tech) . Stainless Steel: Stainless steel trays are used in environments where high corrosion resistance is critical, such as chemical plants, coastal areas, or facilities exposed to moisture. They provide excellent durability and comply with international standards for safety and performance . Fiberglass (FRP): Fiberglass-reinforced plastic trays are lightweight, non-conductive, and highly resistant to corrosion. They are ideal for environments with chemical exposure or where electrical insulation is important . Powder-Coated Steel: Some manufacturers offer powder-coated steel trays, which combine the strength of steel with an additional protective coating to enhance corrosion resistance and aesthetic appeal .
