

What to do if the white tail fiber is difficult to peel off

Summary of Content

Peeling the white tail fiber requires careful mechanical stripping or controlled chemical cleaning to avoid fiber breakage or coating delamination.

Mechanical Stripping

The most common method is to use a fiber optic stripper designed for the specific fiber diameter. Steps include:

- Remove the outer jacket using a cable stripper until the inner coating is exposed .
- Position the fiber in the stripper perpendicular to the fiber axis, with the upper jaw slightly inclined inward .
- Gently push the coating off along the fiber axis, avoiding excessive force that could break the glass core .
- Strip an appropriate length (typically 3–5 cm for fusion splicing) and inspect for any debris or residual coating .
- Clean the exposed fiber with a lint-free cloth and a small amount of alcohol to remove any remaining particles .

Chemical or Solvent-Assisted Cleaning

For fibers with water-blocking gel or stubborn coatings, certain solvents can help:

- Use petroleum-based solvents or degreasers such as Fiber-Clean™, d'Gel, or HydraSol in minimal amounts .
